

ADVERTISEMENT

Ayla Reynolds' mother asks court for death certificate

by WGME |

The mother of missing Waterville toddler, Ayla Reynolds, is now asking the court to officially issue a death certificate. (Contributed Photo)

AA

WATERVILLE (WGME) -- The mother of missing Waterville toddler, Ayla

Reynolds is now asking the court to officially issue a death certificate

FACEBOOK

TWITTER

MAIL

TRENDING

Christmas in 2011.

Her disappearance turned into what is still the largest search in Maine state history, but authorities have long said that they believe she is no longer alive and was the victim of foul play.

No one has ever been charged, and state police have said they believe the people in the home that night, including Ayla's father, Justin DiPietro, are not telling the whole truth.

Her biological mother, Trista Reynolds, was not there that night and has long demanded answers.

Thursday, she retained a Portland law firm to petition the courts for a death certificate to help bring closure.